الدار البيضاء
CASABLANCA

The morning after MBIW vanished, the city waited for a miracle that wasn't coming.

Same city. Same people.
A different silence.

A city that never stops falling.
And still, people scream.

Help us!
Somebody! Please!

We're trapped!
We can't move!

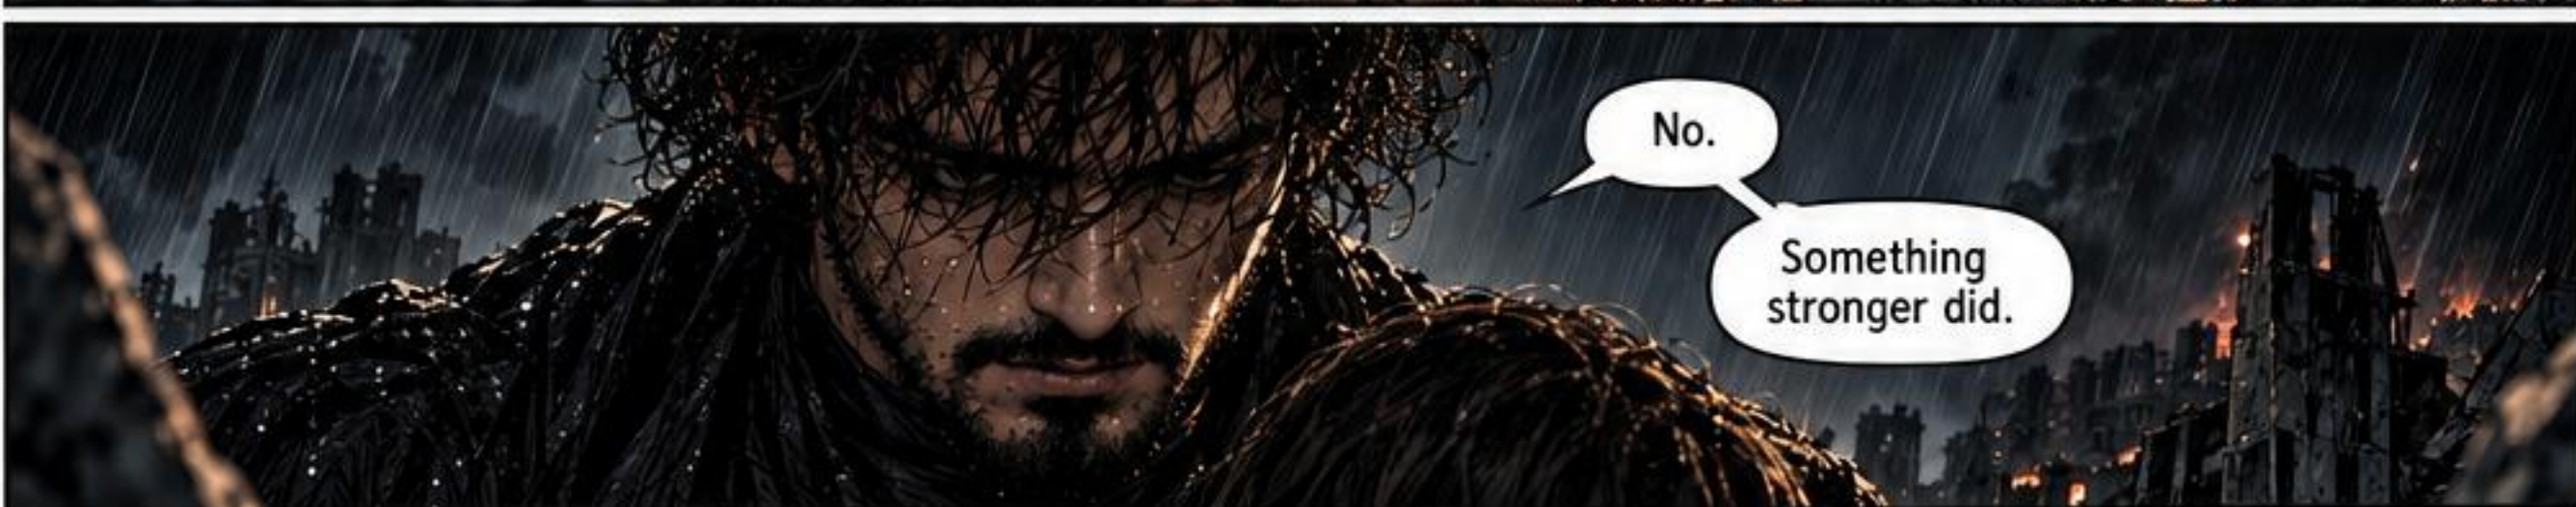

You came back.

No.

Something stronger did.

He saved them. And still they fear him.

MBIW:
You said you were going to protect them.

İMAM:
I did.

MBIW:
They're terrified.

İMAM:
And alive.

MBIW:
That isn't the same thing.

İMAM:
Tonight it is.

SAME PEOPLE DIFFERENT FEARS

SOME TRUTHS STILL HURT

The first thing İMAM gave Casablanca was power.

One district at a time.

Hospitals. Water pumps.
Emergency grids. People.

The lights...

He did that.

The second was fear.

Days have passed.

The looting has stopped. The streets are calmer. Emergency routes are clear. The gangs have disappeared. But fear still lives here.

PEOPLE
PEOPLE

I walked home
at two in the morning
yesterday.

You're crazy.

Nothing happened.

Yeah. That's what scares me.

Everybody was already his enemy when they thought he was weak.

My enemy.

You said "his."

...

Because MBIW is dead.

Then who are you arguing with?

SOME PARTS NEVER DIE.

SOME REFLECTIONS
DON'T SHOW WHO YOU ARE.

THEY SHOW
WHAT YOU ARE BECOMING.

Casablanca was safer.

Shops opened again.
Markets returned.

But everyone remembered
what had happened.

Hospitals were functioning.
People were being treated.
